Welcome to yet another exciting season in the continuing tradition of the Concordia Stingers men's and women's teams.

The Stingers have achieved prominent successes in the past, and I know our athletes will continue to represent Concordia well in the future. They have demonstrated a willingness to work hard and aim high. Their efforts are symbolic of the Concordia mission – a commitment to develop ourselves to full potential.

A university education is more than formal classes, seminars and laboratories. It includes the informal intellectual, social, athletic and cultural encounters that enhance understanding of ourselves and of what we are capable.

Intercollegiate sports are an important part of the Concordia experience. Our teams are competitive and continue to be a source of pride to the entire University community. They deserve our full support and loyalty.

Enjoy the games and join me in encouraging the Stingers during the upcoming season.

Harry Zarins
Director of Recreation & Athletics

Harry Zarins

On behalf of the Department of Recreation and Athletics, I would like to welcome you to one of the great traditions of Concordia University. Welcome to the 1996-'97 intercollegiate sports season.

Leadership, strength and determination characterized by athletic endeavor are attributes that have long been associated with the development and growth of young men and women. This season another group of student-athletes will step up to the challenges and opportunities presented by interuniversity sports. Through their efforts we all gain a sense of the values that are a common thread throughout our university.

I would like to offer my heartfelt thanks to all the people whose support helps keep the Stingers on the leading edge of Canadian university varsity sports. Our student-athletes would not be able to reach such a high level of excellence without the support of sponsors, alumni, fans, friends and family.

I urge you to join me in cheering the Stingers on to great success. I hope to see you often.

Welcome to Concordia University

With approximately 25,000 students (of which 13,346 study full-time), 3,000 faculty and staff members, and more than 80,000 alumni worldwide, Concordia University is one of Canada's largest and most dynamic institutions of higher learning.

Students can choose from 160 undergraduate and graduate programs in four faculties: commerce and administration, fine arts, engineering and computer science, and arts and science. Also, integrated within the faculties are seven colleges and more than a dozen research centres.

The university has two campuses: Sir George Williams, which has approximately 42 buildings spread over 13 blocks of downtown Montreal; and Loyola, which sits seven kilometres away on 46 acres in west-end Montreal. The latter has 37 buildings.

From its founding institutions – Loyola College (1896) and Sir George Williams University (1873) –

Concordia has inherited a tradition of superior teaching supported by the best possible scholarship, creative activity, research and service to society.

Although the majority of its students are recent CEGEP graduates, Concordia maintains an openness to part-time studies, flexible class schedules and an interdisciplinary approach to learning for men and women of all ages and backgrounds.

Concordia University provides students with programs and services to enhance their academic achievement and promote their personal development as responsible, well-rounded individuals. Student Services recognizes that all development, both intellectual and personal, is affected by a number of circumstances: financial, cultural, physical, ethical and psychological. A wide range of activities and services helps students to cope with challenges in these and other areas.

The overall aim of all programs is to ensure that students can make the most of their university experience. As a reflection of these principles, there are six Student Services Directorates: Recreation & Athletics, Financial Aid & Awards, Advocacy & Support Services, Counselling & Development, the Dean of Students and Health Services.

For general information on Concordia University call the public relations department at 848-4880. For details on admissions call 848-2668.

Concordia Men's Hockey Coaches

Yves Beaucage
Head Coach

Yves Beaucage joined the Stingers as an assistant coach in 1988 and took over as head coach in 1990. He had an exceptional rookie campaign and was named Ontario University Athletic Association Hockey Coach of the Year.

In his six years as head coach, Yves has done an exceptional job of bringing talented young hockey players to Concordia University.

His ability to build and sell his program makes him one of the most dynamic and successful coaches in university hockey. A great educator, Yves also runs some very successful hockey schools at Concordia, including a unique and innovative adult conditioning camp.

Rob Boyle
Assistant Coach

Rob Boyle is in his fifth season as an assistant coach with the Stingers. Before stepping behind the Concordia bench, he enjoyed a lengthy career as a versatile Stinger forward and a coaching stint in Glasgow, Scotland. He is responsible for Concordia's Ontario recruiting operation. He is also a much sought-after instructor, who has worked hockey schools in Quebec, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Florida.

As 'Montreal'

as the Kid, the Flower, and the Rocket

When it comes to sports, Montrealers are a breed apart. From dynasties on ice to celebrations on the soccer field, Montreal fans are famous for their passion, their penchant for nicknames – and their pride.

They're also famous for their knowledge of the game. Whether it's the batting average of a right-fielder or the latest rumors of an impending trade, Montrealers know the score every day with the help of The Gazette.

Seven days a week, superstar columnists like Jack Todd, Red Fisher and Pat Hickey cover all the bases in a sports section that's as 'Montreal' as the city that invented basketball.

Concordia Women's Hockey Coaches

Les Lawton
Head Coach

Les Lawton joined the Concordia Stingers as an assistant coach in 1982 and took over the head coaching duties the following year. He has won more than 300 games and eight Quebec league championships. Over the last three years alone, Lawton and the Stingers have posted a 103-11-12 record and won 10 out of 12 tournaments. He is the winningest women's hockey coach in the world.

Lawton has also enjoyed success as the head coach of the Canadian national team. Under his direction, Canada won a gold medal at the 1994 World Championships.

A Montreal native, Lawton lives in Dorval, Que., with his wife Paddy and three children, Mallory, Matthew and Lucas.

Julie Healy
Assistant Coach

Julie Healy could easily run any hockey program in North America, but fortunately she stays at Concordia where she is the perfect complement to Les Lawton. Healy enjoyed an accomplished playing career with the Stingers before joining Lawton behind the bench in the 1985-'86 season. She has also enjoyed success with other teams. Healy has coached the Quebec team and Canada's gold medal entry at the 1995 Pacific Rim tournament.

Yan St. Pierre boldly pursues challenges at Concordia and beyond Yan St. Pierre earned high praise while patrolling the wing for the Stingers in his rookie campaign last season.

Human sponge is an excellent term to use when describing Yan St. Pierre. If you spend 10 minutes talking to him, you can't help but notice his thirst for knowledge and his desire to soak up information, whether it be a new hockey system or a new language and culture. This young man views the world as a vast frontier just waiting to be conquered. And he eagerly chases after as many challenges as possible.

St. Pierre spent last summer in Quito, which is the capital of Ecuador. This South American country is bordered by Columbia in the north, Peru in the south and east, and the Pacific Ocean in the west. The Andes Mountains dominate the landscape. East of the Andes is a region of almost uninhabited tropical jungle. Spanish is the official language, although many Indians speak Quechua or Jarvo. The population of Ecuador is approximately 8.5 million, while the City of Quito boasts a population of about 2 million people. This is where St. Pierre's latest quest for knowledge took him. He and a friend lived with a family in Quito and took courses at the University of Quito.

"I wanted to learn Spanish and to open my mind and my eyes," he said. "I was very interested in the culture in Ecuador and learning about the people. I feel that if you want to know other people, you have to understand how they live."

It's this same approach to learning that brought St. Pierre to Concordia in September of 1995. He grew up in Degelis, Que., a small town near the New Brunswick border. At 15, he left home to play hockey for the Cascades de Jonquière in the Quebec midget AAA league. From there he went to the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League where he played for Drummondville, Sherbrooke, Laval and St. Hyacinthe. Growing up in Degelis and travelling the province with his hockey teams, he never learned any English. Of course, St. Pierre didn't see this as an obstacle when applying to Concordia, he just saw it as an opportunity.

"I thought it would be a good idea to learn something new," he said of his decision to pursue a university education in English. "I wanted to have contact with new people, try new things and develop my character."

Now St. Pierre is quite proficient in English. In fact, if you try to converse with him in French, he'll immediately switch to English. He even wrote a 10-page paper in English for his management class last semester, an accomplishment which he is quite proud of.

Throughout all of his adventures, St. Pierre has the unyielding support of his family, which he credits for giving him an appreciation for education and the encouragement to pursue his dreams. His mother, Francine Viel, is an adult education teacher and his father, Marcel St. Pierre, is a retired Sûreté du Québec police officer.

"My parents have always let my brothers and me live our lives," St. Pierre explained. "But they've taught us to look after ourselves and encouraged us to do well, to try new things. They wanted us to learn, to think for ourselves and to develop our character."

This approach to parenting seems to have paid off. Yan is an exceptional student who hopes to have a career with the RCMP when he graduates. His brother François, 19, is currently studying at the Nicolet police academy and his older brother Eric, 24, has a bachelor's degree from Université de Laval and hopes to become a teacher.

Yan St. Pierre is the only elite athlete in the family, however. As a rookie with the Concordia Stingers, this right winger became a big contributor early on.

"It was evident in his first year that Yan would have a great impact in the OUAA," said assistant coach Rob Boyle. "His tremendous speed and physical play gave the Stingers a high quality two-way forward. He averaged nearly a point a game and had one of the highest plus/minus on the team."

Just as it was a transition year for the Stingers, it was a transition year for St. Pierre. In addition to living in Montreal for the first time, attending a new school and learning a new language, head coach Yves Beaucage wanted him to try a new approach to hockey.

"In junior, I was a defensive specialist," St. Pierre said. "Yves wants me to be a scorer. I like this. It's a good feeling to know that people think you can score goals and that you have a big role with the team."

Granato and Deschamps are friendly foes

Two hockey players stare each other down in the faceoff circle, waiting for the puck to drop. One is representing Canada, the other wears the American colors and each is prepared to do whatever it takes to win the draw and the game.

That was the scenario at the Pacific Rim Women's Hockey Championship in April of 1995, when centres Nancy Deschamps (Team Canada) and Cammi Granato (Team U.S.A.), both members of the Concordia Stingers, lined up on opposite sides of the puck for the first time.

Was it a difficult situation? Was it memorable? Which of the Stinger teammates won the faceoff?

"I don't remember," Deschamps said.

That's typical of the two women. Despite being players at the highest level of women's hockey in the world, both are very modest and humble. Also, any rivalry or competitiveness is left in the international arenas.

"When we play against each other we both try to win and get the most out of our opportunities," Deschamps said. "When we play together we try to get the most out of each other."

If anything, their involvement in the two different national team programs seems to unite them.

"Nancy and Cammi first played against each other at the Pacific Rim in 1995," explained Concordia assistant coach Julie Healy. "They played at Pacific Rim again last spring in Vancouver, and I noticed how much closer they were after. It was like they had this special bond. It was a pretty intense competition in Vancouver. I guess when you come back from that kind of experience, you are closer because you've both lived through it and all the pressure that comes with representing your country."

The two have a lot in common aside from being centres, Stingers and national team hockey players. They have many of the

"They are very offensive players," Healy said. "Both can put the puck in the net. Both work really hard on their defensive games so that they can be more complete players."

There are some differences in their offensive skills. Granato has exceptional passing ability, while Deschamps has what everyone calls "The Move."

"Nancy shows you the puck," Healy said. "When you come forward, she pulls it back and goes by you like you're not there. Everybody knows about it but they can't defend it. During the finals of the 1995 women's nationals, she pulled 'The Move' and it was shown in slow motion on TSN about eight times during the broadcast."

Another important component they share is character.

"The thing that puts them where they are is their determination to improve," said Healy. "They are always striving to get better. They are not happy being as good as they are. They don't take for granted that they are on their national teams."

Deschamps credits Granato, who was already a member of the U.S. national team when she arrived at Concordia, with being a good role model, especially when it comes to the mental aspects of the game.

"She taught me how to discipline myself and to be a leader," Deschamps said. "I also learned to look at the game in different ways."

Deschamps tried out for the Quebec team and couldn't crack the lineup when she first arrived at Concordia for the 1993-'94 season. The following year she made the provincial team and from there she caught the attention of the national coaches. Now that she's reached the same plateau as Granato, she too has become a mentor to the younger Stingers.

"I think it's very important for the younger players to know exactly what level you have to play at to be a national team player," said Stinger head coach Les Lawton. "Many of our players have expressed an interest in playing at that level. Having players like Nancy and Cammi on your team helps the young players understand the type of commitment and work involved with playing for the Stingers, provincial and national teams."

Stingers team up with Habs at historic parade

Adoring fans line the streets waiting eagerly for their favorite hockey players, flashbulbs are going off every few feet and there are television cameras everywhere, but the members of the Concordia Stingers take it all in stride.

All right, so the Stingers are not the main attraction at this event. However, it is still a great honor and thrill to be a part of history in the making. Last March, the Concordia Stingers men's and women's hockey teams were invited to take part in the Montreal Canadiens' parade from the historic Montreal Forum to their new home at the state-of-the-art Molson Centre.

"I thought it was great of the City of Montreal to recognize our school and our hockey program," said Concordia second-year winger Mark Babony. "I felt really proud to be a part of this school and program. Of all the schools and teams around, they chose us to be a part of their celebration."

The Stingers arrived at the Montreal Forum early on Friday, March 15, where they were given instructions and divided into groups of 10 to 12. Each group had a different assignment. Some carried Stanley Cup banners down Ste. Catherine St., others escorted vintage convertibles carrying Canadiens' greats from the past and present, and several Stingers carried placards that identified the players riding in the cars.

"I was extremely excited," recalled Stingers veteran forward Erin Leslie, who collected autographs from defencemen Patrice Brisebois and Lyle Odelein. "It was a really big deal for me. The Canadiens are a big deal and to be that close, to be a part of history was a big honor for me. It's really exciting to tell other people about our experience."

For goaltender Matt Langsford, the sense of being part of a historical event was what will stand out in his mind years from now.

"It was a good opportunity to be a part of a tradition, something that was being passed onto a new generation with the new building," he said.

All the Stingers received Montreal Canadiens sweatshirts to wear during the festivities and most had them autographed.

"It was the biggest honor to meet Maurice Richard and Guy Lafleur," Babony said. "They were more than generous giving me their autographs."

For Langsford, now in his second year with Concordia, meeting the former greats also left a lasting impression.

"Players like Guy Lafleur and Boom Boom Geoffrion were right there," he said. "You've got to respect what they did for the game of hockey. They set the pace for today's stars."

The players have all raved about being included in the parade, but Yves Beaucage, the men's head coach, wasn't sure his players would be all that enthusiastic when he first approached them with the opportunity.

"At first I was worried that some players would feel they were too old to be in a parade," he explained. "But I learned once you're a hockey fanatic, you're always a hockey fanatic. You never grow out of it. When we got there and they saw all the old Canadiens players, that was it. It turned out to be quite an event, a party."

The Stingers ate lunch at the Molson Centre after the parade and were given tickets to the official opening of the centre, where later that night the Stanley Cup banners and retired Canadiens sweaters were raised to the rafters.

Coach Beaucage hopes the festivities have a profound effect on the members of both Concordia's hockey teams, especially those who grew up outside the province of Quebec.

"It was good for all of them to see up close the importance of hockey in the city," he said. "Montreal is the hockey mecca."

Friends of Concordia Hockey continues to grow

Something seems to happen to old Concordia, Loyola and Sir George Williams hockey players when they leave university.

"They all put on 10 pounds," says current Concordia head coach Yves Beaucage with a laugh. "It's kind of a joke around here. I warn all the players that once they leave university hockey they put on 10 pounds. It's a curse."

Since Beaucage and assistant coach Rob Boyle started investing a lot of time in reviving the Friends of Concordia Hockey in 1995, they have seen a lot of former players drop by to visit. Some bring along a little extra weight, a few bring along wives and children, and others bring news of players who have been out of touch. Every visit, phone call and update is greatly appreciated.

"Our main objective with the Friends of Concordia Hockey is to have the alumni feel welcome back here at the rink," Beaucage said.

With that in mind, the current Stinger administration has gone out of its way to make Homecoming a two-day long party/reunion for all the former hockey players. The 1996 activities were the most elaborate to date. On Friday, Oct. 4, about 45 members of the alumni and current Stingers took part in a golf tournament. That was followed up by a roast beef dinner at Brasserie Molson O'Keefe the same evening with the alumni from all Concordia varsity sports. In all, 125 people attended the dinner, and 57 of those were representing men's hockey.

The following day, the alumni played hockey in the morning and attended the Homecoming football game and the post-game reception in the Guadagni Lounge.

"The alumni game is very popular," Beaucage said. "The guys like having a chance to skate in the old rink again, and they like to sit in the dressing room and trade stories just like the old days."

Russia trip the experience of a lifetime

When the Concordia Stingers women's hockey team landed in Moscow on Oct. 20, it was a landmark event in the annals of hockey history. It marked the first time a North American women's hockey team arrived in Russia for a competition.

The Ice Hockey Federation of Russia invited the Stingers to participate in its four-team women's international tournament in the City of Magnitogorsk. The Russian federation originally asked Team Canada to participate in the competition, but when the national team wasn't available, the offer went to the Concordia Stingers.

"We were the logical choice. We are looked at as trailblazers in the sport," said Stinger head coach Les Lawton. "We develop many players, we were the first to host the junior national championships, which is now a well-respected, elite women's competition, both our coaches have been involved international competition and we had the commitment from our players."

Concordia also played host to the Russian national team last March before a crowd of about 500 people. The Stingers won the contest 6-4.

"When we played the Russian national team, they were impressed with our skill level," Lawton said. "But I think what they were most impressed with was that women's hockey is a major sport at the university and across the country."

The Stingers played in a round-robin, which included the Swedish national team, an elite club from Finland and their hosts, the Russian national team. Gold and bronze medal games were held on Oct. 27.

The team spent a couple of days in Moscow, where they stayed at the national training centre and then it was on to Magnitogorsk, which is a very industrialized city about 800 miles south-east of Moscow.

"Although it cost the players a fair amount of money, it was something they couldn't afford not to do," Lawton said of the opportunity. "For some of them it's going to be their only chance to play internationally and represent their country."

It really was the opportunity of a lifetime for the support people, the coaches and the players.

"Everybody felt very honored and excited," Lawton said. "To have one of the highlights of your season so early in the schedule can really bode well for the rest of our year."

Signage:

The key to selling is location.

Where is an audience most captive?

At one of our sporting events.

Football Stadium: Concordia Stadium averages 20,000 spectators during the football season. In addition to this, during the summer months it is home to the Concordia Summer Sports Camp (300 children - ages 5 to 13 - and their parents every week).

Hockey Arena: Concordia Arena averages 60 varsity games per year, as well as more than 100 intramural events, thousands of students during final exams and many other organized hockey and roller hockey events. Concordia Arena also hosts a minimum of three major hockey tournaments every year:

The Theresa Humes Women's Invitational
Loyola High School Tournament
MBA Tournament

Gymnasium: The Concordia Gym hosts more than 70 basketball and volleyball games each year, as well as hundreds of intramural events, three major tournaments and final exams.
